Weatherproofing Advisors were successfully appointed to carry out a refurbishment of the retail roof at Shell Hillington, Glasgow

In conjunction with Vinci Facilities, Weatherproofing Advisors engaged with Shell to establish the condition of the existing roof coverings at this busy petrol station in Glasgow.

The existing retail unit roof consisted of asbestos tiles, which displayed the typical aging characteristics associated with a system of this age and type.

Several of the tiles had been replaced, while various patch repairs had been carried out on associated flashings and guttering.

Given the nature of the site, access was restricted so WPA utilised its commercial drone license to produce a photographic roof condition survey report.

Working in conjunction with the client, a specification was developed to provide the most practical solution for long-term maintenance, while causing the minimum disruption to daily operations.

The existing tiles were removed from the site, in accordance with HSE regulations. Following the stripping process, new marine-grade plywood was fitted and sealed, which provided a sound base for the new system as well as providing security to the property below.

To provide a long-term, maintenance-free roofing system that is aesthetically suitable for the surroundings, the Britmet Liteslate system was selected.

This lightweight synthetic slate is made from 95% recycled polymers and incorporates all associated flashings and rainwater goods. Designed to give a traditional slate appearance, the system is guaranteed for 40 years against weather penetration.
